

Adaptive Teaching

From principle to practice

A two-day professional development programme for primary and secondary schools.

Adaptive teaching is central to high-quality, inclusive classroom practice, especially for students experiencing disadvantage. It enables teachers to respond precisely to gaps in knowledge, varying levels of prior attainment, and differences in access to support, ensuring that learning is both accessible and appropriately challenging.

This two-day programme is designed to support school leaders to move beyond theory and into disciplined, evidence-informed implementation.

Participants will explore the evidence base, examine practical models, and develop a clear, context-specific approach to embedding adaptive teaching across classrooms and subjects.

Who is this for?

- Headteachers and Executive Leaders
- Senior Leaders responsible for teaching and learning
- Subject and phase leaders
- SENCOs and inclusion leads

What you will gain

- A clear understanding of the evidence underpinning adaptive teaching.
- Practical tools and models to support classroom implementation.
- Insight into the building blocks of effective adaptive practice.
- Structured time to plan for implementation in your own setting.

Register

£195 per person, including lunch; £100 for an additional member of staff from the same school.
